

No H4096.916

No Plays Exchanged

BAKER'S EDITION OF PLAYS

Her Deaf Ear

Price, 25 Cents

4407B.716

WALTER H. BAKER COMPANY
BOSTON

6462

147

NEW PLAYS AND BOOKS

— Season 1925 —

BOSTON THEATRE GUILD PLAYS

With an introduction by Frank W. C. Hersey, A.M., Instructor of English, Harvard University. A collection of five plays. "The Three Gifts" by Florence Converse,—one male, three females. "Desert Smoke" by Dwight L. Clarke,—four males, three females. "An Old Chester Secret" by Sallie Kemper,—three males, two females. "Dorinda Dares" by Angela Morris,—two males, two females. "Buying Culture" by C. Antoinette Wood,—one male, two females. These unusual plays have been selected because they were especially liked by the audiences which attended the first performances of them by the Theatre Guild of Boston. They differ in mood and purpose; they portray diverse groups of characters, and thus they produce a variety of effects. One of the plays is a realistic drama with mystical overtones; one a fantasy; one a domestic tragi-comedy; another a romantic comedy; another a farce. Indeed, these plays have that chief quality which is the basis of the hope for much success—they tell their story well, and in terms of the theatre. Each has its own unity of tone, and thus makes an impression not blurred by discordant elements. Each play develops a main situation—a situation not huddled and inarticulate, but amplified and vocal with emotion. During its six seasons, the Guild has presented about thirty-six plays—the five herein printed are the pick of the lot. Each play commands a five dollar production royalty—the volume, bound in a special library edition.

Price, $1.25 per copy.

FOLK LORE FROM MAMMY DAYS

By Mary Johnson Blackburn

The genuine black Mammy sleeps with her generation, and her songs are but echoes of a poetic past. We offer these songs and stories for the children of America who never knew the sweet and subtle charm of Mammy's voice. These are speaking pieces in verse and prose, and most of them are in the words of an actual Mammy who was nurse to the author. They are the real thing, straight from Georgia, and they have stood the test of many public readings to enthusiastic audiences. For those who are fond of Southern Lullabies there are about fifteen pieces which can be crooned or sung to music which is given at the end of the book. It is a collection which gives all the scope imaginable to the individual skill of the reciter, in music, expression, and acting. A capital collection of absolutely fresh material. Price, $1.25 cloth bound.

Send for a Copy of our New Free Catalogue.

It Describes More Than a Thousand Plays.

BAKER'S PLAYS, BOSTON, MASS.

HER DEAF EAR

A Parlor Farce in One Act

440913.916

By ARLO BATES

Author of "An Interrupted Proposal," "A Business Meeting," "A Gentle Fury," etc.

—————

RECEIVED

BOSTON

WALTER H. BAKER & CO

Her Deaf Ear

CHARACTERS

ABIGAIL NASON, a severe old maid.

HELEN WEST, her niece.

MAID.

REGINALD BLAIR, a wealthy young man.

JACK GAY, a young man not so wealthy.

Costumes, Modern

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY ARLO BATES.

Her Deaf Ear

SCENE.—A parlor, comfortably furnished. Telephone in any convenient place. Near centre of room a small table, on which is lamp, a book or two, and a skein of worsted. On the right side of table, in rocking-chair, is seated MISS NASON, knitting. HELEN is moving about the room, behind.

MISS NASON. Do sit down, Helen. You make me as nervous as a witch fidgeting about so.

HELEN. I was only looking for something.

(Sits in chair on right of Miss N.)

MISS N. Don't sit on that side. You know I can't hear a sound with that ear. I believe you always get next my deaf ear just to spite me.

HEL. I beg your pardon, Aunt Nabby. I didn't think.

(Goes to chair on left of table. Sits, crocheting.)

MISS N. Why shouldn't you think? What have you on your mind to prevent you from remembering a thing like that? Unless, indeed, you are thinking about beaus.

HEL. I certainly wasn't.

MISS N. Is anybody coming here to-night?

HEL. I haven't asked anybody to come. Have you?

MISS N. You are trying to deceive me. You think because I am an old woman and half deaf, you can play any pranks on me that you please.

HEL. I haven't been playing any pranks.

MISS N. Haven't you asked that John Gay to come here to-night?

HEL. I didn't ask him. I only said I should be in.

MISS N. Oh, ho, miss! Then he is coming.

HEL. I didn't say —

MISS N. Humph! It's no matter what you said or didn't say. I've asked a better man myself; so it's all right.

HEL. Who is it?

MISS N. The man I've picked out for you; Reginald Blair.

HEL. That molly-coddle! I detest Reggie Blair.

MISS N. You'll get over that; and as I manage this family, I suppose I have a right to say who shall call here.

HEL. (rising). Very well. If Reggie Blair is coming to see you, I should only be in the way. I can go out, I suppose.

(Crosses, so as to be on Miss N.'s right.)

MISS N. You will stay where you are. I know what you want. You'd go over to Hettie Gray's, and telephone to John Gay to come there.

HEL. (on deaf side). That's a good idea; but I shouldn't think of going if he's coming here.

MISS N. What did you say?

HEL. (going behind table, so as to be on left side of aunt). I said I shouldn't think of going.

MISS N. Humph! I shouldn't think of having you go. (Rising.) You are not to leave this house to-night. If anybody comes to see you, I'll see them too. I'm going up to change my cap, and don't you stir out of this room.

(She turns, so that her right side is toward HEL.)

HEL. It's because somebody is coming that I'll stay to please you.

MISS N. (turning left ear to HEL.). What's that?

HEL. I said I'd stay to please you.

MISS N. (turning again toward door). You are very meek all of a sudden.

HEL. If I am meek, I don't get it from the Nason side of the family.

MISS N. (turning). Don't keep saying things that I can't hear. What did you say, then?

HEL. You've always told me the Nasons were all meek.

MISS N. They are; but I never know what the West half of you will do. [Exit.]

HEL. I can tell you what the West half of me will do, then. It will telephone to Jack. (She goes to telephone and takes up the receiver.) Give me Main nine seven double four, please. (Pause for each dash in what follows.)——Hallo. Is that you, Jack?—Of course 'tis I. I suppose so many girls call you up that you couldn't tell which one it was.—You silly thing! You can't send a kiss over the wire!—Do stop making that smacking noise. They'll hear at Central. Besides, I want to say something quick—I don't always say things quick either. I've a great mind not to tell you a single thing.—Well, for this one time I'll forgive you.—Why, when you come to-night I want you to get on the right side of Aunt Nabbie.—Well, if you never have, I'll tell you how to do it now. You must be sure always to be on her left side.—Ha, ha, ha! Don't make me laugh! Of course it is! Her left side is her right side.—You must stop—ha, ha!—making me laugh, or I can't tell you. It's a deadly secret, and she'd murder me if she knew I told you; but she's stone deaf in her right ear. You must never let her suspect you know it, for she's awfully sensitive; but if you'll get on the side that can hear, and let Reggie Blair be on the other—I didn't ask him either! You know I didn't. She did.—Don't make me laugh, I tell you. She may come in any minute. If you'll just twist the things he says a little, you can get her as mad with him as a hatter.—I'm not a sly little piece; and I think you are awfully mean to say so, when I'm doing it all for you.—Don't make that noise! I know somebody'll hear; and what good is a kiss over the telephone, anyway. Come as early as you can.—Here she comes. Good-bye.

(She hangs up receiver and leaves telephone. Enter Miss N.)

MISS N. Didn't I hear the telephone bell?

HEL. Did you? Perhaps your friend Reggie wanted to speak to you.

MISS N. Now, miss, you may stop being impudent. Sit down there, and listen to me. I'm not at all satisfied at the way you have been going on with that John Gay. Your father knew what he was about when he made his will.

HEL. I won't say anything against father; only I was so little when he died that he couldn't have realized that I would ever be grown up. If he had, he never would have forbidden me to marry without your consent.

MISS N. He knew that the West headstrongness in you might be too much for the Nason.

HEL. Well, if I can't marry anybody without your consent, at least you can't make me marry anybody I don't want to. You may be sure of that.

MISS N. You obstinate thing! I'm only considering your good. Mr. Blair will be the richest man in the county.

HEL. He isn't rich enough to buy me, even if you want me to sell myself.

MISS N. Don't talk like a silly schoolgirl. You can make up your mind to like him as well as anybody else.

HEL. If that's your idea of —

MISS N. It's my idea of common sense.

HEL. It may be the sort of sense common with you.—The doorbell rang.

(The maid ushers in MR. BLAIR. He is in evening dress, with flower in buttonhole. His manner is rather affected.)

MAID. Mr. Blair.

[Exit.

HEL. Good-evening, Mr. Blair.

BLAIR. Good-evening, Miss West. I am delighted to find you in. How do you do, Miss Nason? I am enchanted to see you looking so well.

MISS N. Good-evening, Mr. Blair. Thank you; I am always well, I am happy to say.

BLAIR. Really you should rap on wood when you say that! Ha! ha!

HEL. Won't you sit down? (He takes chair on left of MISS N., she chair on right.) It is very good of you to come to see Aunt Nabby.

BLAIR. I didn't come to see your aunt—er—that is, of course I came to see you both.

MISS N. (stiffly). I hope I am not in the way, Mr. Blair.

BLAIR. Oh, most certainly not. I always so enjoy your conversation, Miss Nason, but when Miss West said —

HEL. As I was saying, Mr. Blair, it is kind of you to call on her, for of course old people feel these little attentions.

BLAIR. Oh, but Miss Nason isn't so very old.

MISS N. Old! I hope not! (She turns suspiciously to HEL.) What are you saying? Sit over there, so that I can see you without turning my back on Mr. Blair.

HEL. (going over to L.). I didn't suppose you would object to my saying it was kind of Mr. Blair to call.

MAID (showing in MR. GAY). Mr. Gay. [Exit.

HEL. (going to meet him). Good-evening, Jack. How did you happen to think of coming in to-night?

GAY. I think about coming every night, only I don't dare to come too often.

(He goes to MISS N., and shakes hands, saying "Good-evening" to her and to BLAIR. Then sits, on right of MISS N. HEL., standing behind her aunt and BLAIR, motions to him that he is on the wrong side.)

MISS N. Helen, isn't this room rather warm?

HEL. It's suffocating. Mr. Blair, won't you open this window for me?

BLAIR. Delighted, I'm sure.

(BLAIR goes to her. She indicates a window at back of room. GAY also rises. HEL., while BLAIR is busy with the window, motions to GAY to change seats. He does not at first understand, and she touches her ear. Then he goes to place left vacant by BLAIR. During the next speech BLAIR and HEL. return from window, he taking seat on right. HEL. busies herself at back of room a moment.)

GAY. You are always so industrious, Miss Nason. I should think you would get tired of knitting.

MISS N. I should get more tired of having my hands idle.

GAY. But it is such fussy work.

BLAIR. I suppose it doesn't seem so to Miss Nason, because she does it so much better than others.

GAY. Why should you say that she doesn't do other things well?

MISS N. What's that?

GAY. It seems to me odd that Mr. Blair should think you knit well because you can't do other things well. Of course that is absurd.

BLAIR. I didn't say anything of the kind.

MISS N. I am happy to say that I do as many things well as most women of my age.

BLAIR. No one would dare to think of age in connection with Miss Nason.

GAY. What an extraordinary thing to say! Why shouldn't any one dare to think of Miss Nason's age, Mr. Blair?

BLAIR. Why, I said—I said ——

MISS N. Mr. Blair seems to be much concerned about my age to-night.

BLAIR. But I didn't say anything of the kind. Don't be angry, my dear Miss Nason !

GAY. Angry ! Of course Miss Nason is not angry. She can still afford to be amused at jokes about her age.

MISS N. Of course I am not angry. I hope I am able to control my temper, even if remarks are made that are anything but polite.

BLAIR. But I haven't said anything !

GAY. You never do, Reggie, if you'll excuse my mentioning it.

BLAIR (starting up angrily). I shall not excuse you, Mr. Gay.

(HEL., who has been listening with evident amusement, goes to table and takes worsted. She speaks while on left of her aunt.)

HEL. I am going to ask Mr. Blair to hold my worsted, Aunt Nabby. That will give him something to do, and keep him out of mischief.

(She puts the skein over his hands, and begins to wind the worsted.)

MISS N. Be sure and wind it loose.

BLAIR. What difference does that make ?

HEL. If it is too tight it gets stringy.

GAY. Just as you are when you are tight, Reggie.

BLAIR. I don't get tight.

MISS N. Your expression doesn't seem to me to be very refined, Mr. Gay.

GAY. But the thing isn't refined, you know.

MISS N. (turning toward BLAIR, but still with her right side toward him). I hope your temperance principles are not loose, Mr. Blair. Helen, I believe you are getting that ball too hard.

(She rises to examine the ball of worsted. This brings her back to the audience, and her right side to GAY.)

HEL. I don't think it's tight, Aunt Nabby.

BLAIR. My temperance principles, Miss Nason, are above reproach.

MISS N. I hope they are.

GAY (laughing, and touching his finger to his ear in panto- mime behind the back of Miss N.). I say, Helen, we are just going it like a house afire.

BLAIR. What singular language, Mr. Gay.

GAY. Well, why not? I'm still a bachelor, so you can't expect me to use plural language. Besides, it wouldn't be polite to the old lady you didn't come—to visit.

(Miss N., turns suddenly while he is speaking to take her seat. She starts as she hears the last words, and speaks very stiffly.)

MISS N. What did you remark, Mr. Gay?

HEL. Oh, Jack! You've spoiled everything!

GAY. I beg your pardon, Miss Nason; but I couldn't help thinking once more of the impertinence of Reggie's remark earlier in the evening. It was so absurd, as well as impolite.

MISS N. I must say I do not see the need of bringing it up again.

GAY. Why, of course you can afford to be amused, or I shouldn't have referred to it.

HEL. Oh, Jack, do be careful!

BLAIR. You both talk as if Miss Nason was deaf.

GAY. Deaf! What an absurd idea!

MISS N. Who is deaf?

GAY. Nobody but those who won't hear. It is one of the funny things that Reggie says, like his wondering if you were not out of temper.

MISS N. I am sorry, Mr. Blair, that you think my temper so bad.

BLAIR. Oh, Miss Nason, Mr. Gay misrepresented my remark. I am sure that if anybody has a good temper, you have.

(She twists her left ear around so as to hear the last words, and turns away offended.)

MISS N. Oh, I have a temper, have I?

GAY. Reggie, you are downright rude to-night. What is the matter with you?

BLAIR (becoming much excited). There is nothing the matter with me! You are trying to make me a ludicrous spectacle!

HEL. Please don't flourish about so. I can't wind this worsted if you wave your arms like a windmill.

BLAIR. But Miss Nason has misunderstood what I said.

GAY. It doesn't make things much better to say that Miss Nason is not able to understand.

BLAIR. That wasn't at all what I said!

HEL. It sounded a good deal like it.

BLAIR. I uttered something entirely different.

HEL. Do hold your arms still.

GAY. Are you sure you know what you do say, Reggie?

BLAIR. I will thank you, Mr. Gay, not to be so familiar. Miss Nason, I beg ——

GAY. Not to be so familiar, Miss Nason! Well, that does cap the climax!

BLAIR. I tell you ——

HEL. You are tangling my worsted all up!

BLAIR. Confound your worsted! I beg your pardon, but ——

HEL. (taking it from him). I will take good care not to ask you to do me a favor again, Mr. Blair. (Goes to GAY.) Do you mind holding this wool for Aunt Nabby, Jack?

GAY. It is a pleasure for me to do anything for Miss Nason.

BLAIR. I was willing to hold it.

HEL. You said Aunt Nabby's worsted might be confounded.

MISS N. I should be sorry to have you troubled on my account, Mr. Blair.

BLAIR (confused and half whining). What have I done that you all walk all over me?

GAY. Walking is such good exercise. You might try it, old fellow.

(HEL. finishes winding, puts ball on table, and goes to R.

BLAIR rises.)

BLAIR. I think I will try it, thank you. I thought I was paying Miss West a compliment by coming, but she doesn't seem to appreciate it.

HEL. Oh, I do appreciate it, I assure you, I like to have men get into the habit of coming, against the time I am an old maid.

(BLAIR goes to MISS N. and holds out his hand. She sees it, rises, and turns to hear his next remark.)

BLAIR. I never could see the fun of calling on old maids. Oh! I beg your pardon, Miss Nason. I didn't mean that for you.

GAY. Upon my word I never heard such impudence!

MISS N. (courtesying). This old maid is your very obedient servant, Mr. Blair.

BLAIR. Oh, I shall never dare look anybody in the face again.

MISS N. I have the honor to bid you good-evening, Mr. Blair.

GAY. So long, Reggie.

HEL. Good-evening, Mr. Blair. It was so kind of you to come.

(BLAIR looks from one to another a moment; tries to speak; then rushes out of the room.)

MISS N. I never was so deceived in anybody in my life.

GAY. I think you have been deceived, indeed, Miss Nason. It is inconceivable that anybody should take advantage of your hospitality to impose on you so.

HEL. You know I never could bear him, Aunt Nabby.

MISS N. You needn't remind me of that. However, I'm done with him. I must say, Mr. Gay, that you have behaved in a most gentlemanly manner throughout this very unpleasant evening.

GAY. I have had hard work to restrain my feelings, Miss Nason. If it had been anybody but you, I should not have resented it so much.

MISS N. Humph! Don't plaster it on too thick.

GAY (laughing). Well, you see you are Helen's aunt.

MISS N. Humph! Perhaps you mean it. At least I will give you the benefit of the doubt. You may have her.

HEL. Oh, Aunt Nabby!

GAY (kissing Miss N.'s hand). At least I will mean everything I say to you for the rest of my life, Miss Nason; and I'll never say anything but good.

MISS N. I shall find ways enough to test your sincerity, I dare say. Good night. (She goes to the door, and turns her head.) Don't sit up late, Helen.

HEL. No, Aunt Nabby. Good-night. (Exit Miss N.

GAY holds out his arms, and after a second of hesitation HEL.

runs into them. He embraces her. Then she pushes him back, and holds him at arm's length.) Oh, Jack!

GAY. What is it, darling?

HEL. Oh, don't you ever, ever, ever let Aunt Nabby find out that you knew about her deaf ear!

CURTAIN

1925—NEW PLAYS—1925

THE REBELLION OF YOUTH. By J. C. McMullen. 14 females; may be played by 12 characters. Scenery, one simple interior. The story of the play is that of a mother who in her girlhood had tried to kick over the traces, and in her turn has three daughters who show a strong tendency to repeat the experience of their mother. The mother takes the advice of a humble but very wise Irish neighbor and adopts very strenuous and, socially, somewhat dangerous methods to bring her high-spirited girls to their senses. She succeeds to the queen's taste, and to the great scandal of the daughters and their entire reformation. It is one thing to make a fool of yourself in the public eye, but quite another to see one's mother tread the primrose path. They reform her, to her secret amusement, and in so doing they reform themselves. The audience is always in the secret with the mother, so that the laugh is on the daughters from moment to moment. Prologue: Mother opens the book of her past. Act one: She lays before Margaret the rebellion of her youth. Act two: Shows how mother quenched the revolt. Epilogue: The closing of the book. Playing time, 2 hours. Price, 35 Cents.

CORNEY TURNS THE TRICK. A Farce-Comedy in Three Acts. By Erastus Osgood. 9 female characters. A simple interior scene throughout. Modern costumes. We feel sure that college and high school girls, will delight in meeting — and later impersonating — the charming inmates of "Mrs. Truesdal's select boarding house." "Beth Karson," the athletic girl from the West. "Dora (Cupid) Hammond" who lives in day dreams of gay Cavaliers and gallant knights. "Dulcie Leyland" a Virginian beauty. "Madge Allenton" a thoroughbred to her finger tips. "Arabella Brown" a "cute little kid" working her way through college. Then, in direct contrast "Miss Omega Tooms," — a great character part — a little "off" on Abyssinia, with tender memories of a lover — who never existed. "Hannah Marsh," the transient boarder, who is a mystery, and in the second act the mystery increases — and so does the fun. Then comes the third act with a big surprise, in which a musical comedy star appears. But the character who should "stop the show" if happily cast, is "Corney Farrall," the daughter of a newly-rich contractor and politician. Her vocabulary of slang is unlimited, and for cleverness and cunning she could give lessons to a fox. She is determined to captivate "Lord D'Marcy," which she does — and doesn't. Become acquainted with all these amusing people, you'll like them, even down to "Andrew" the cat. Price, 35 Cents.

THE WAY OF A MAID. A Rollicking Comedy in Three Acts, for 8 males and 6 females, ad. lib. By Fannie Barnett Linsky. The cast can easily be cut to a smaller number as two of the male characters are relatively unimportant. Two easy scenes, one of which is a cabaret party, giving the ladies the opportunity to wear pretty party frocks. The plot tells the story of a correspondent "that did not correspond" a maid who was not a "maid," a wonderful step-mother, and a pair of "terrible twins." We guarantee a laugh in every line and some very clever situations, all of which help to make "The Way of A Maid" a most attractive entertainment for old and young. It gives the opportunity for plenty of individual talent and plays a full evening. No royalty, provided at least ten copies of the printed books are bought. Price, 35 Cents.

CAPTAIN DREW ON LEAVE. A Comedy in Four Acts. By Hubert Henry Davies. 4 males, 3 females. Two simple sets. It is our privilege this season to publish another successful play from the pen of Mr. Davies. Originally produced in London, with Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. Louis Calvert, Miss Mary Moore and Miss Marion Perry in the cast. It is now offered for the first time in printed form. The many who have enjoyed the plays, "Cousin Kate," "The Mollusc," "Mrs. Gorrings Necklace," and "A Single Man," will delight in having a copy of this latest play which reads as well as it acts. It is a story of English family life, and the characters are the best examples of the type Mr. Davies draws so well. The drab household of Moxon takes on a new color when Captain Drew appears on the scene. The development of his mild flirtation with Mrs. Moxon, and its logical ending, provides an excellent evening's entertainment. Reading clubs in particular, will welcome the play. Royalty quoted on application. Books in a library edition at 75 Cents per copy.

1925—NEW PLAYS—1925

CHOICE MONOLOGUES. By Mariana M. Tallman. A well-named volume of clever, very amusing, choice and original pieces by a popular reader. With a good memory and a well-trained voice much can be done with any of them. A good monologue is always a "hit" with a mixed audience, especially when, as with these, they are mostly female parts written for female monologists. Each piece has been tested by many audiences, and the volume can be highly recommended. CONTENTS: An Order by Telephone. A Letter of Introduction. Getting Freddy Ready. A String of Beads. A Desperate Postmistress. John with the Grip. Me T'ree B'y Schouts. Price, 35 Cents.

COMICS. A book of monologues by Walter Ben Hare. A 1925 collection of forty-four new and original readings, monologues, pianologues, and encore bits in prose and verse. The classified contents are: "Contest Selections," "Musical Readings," "Costume Readings for Girls," "Costume Readings for Boys," "Childrens Selections," "Readings appropriate for Christmas-Hallowe'en-Thanksgiving-Washington's Birthday-Easter-Fourth of July-several Irish selections and three Top-Liners in negro dialect." There are pieces for old and young — male and female. The author's name is a certain guarantee of the quality of the contents. Mr. Hare has to his credit more successful monologues than any other writer of the present day. He writes for many of the best known vaudeville stars and his selections have the distinction of being prize winners thousands of times. One of our customers recently said "Mr. Hare's monologues are worth two thousand dollars a year to me. 'COMICS' will provide me with a complete new program for this year, with the investment on my part of the price of a few sodas." The present collection is head and shoulders above any other printed book of its kind and we recommend it without stint. Beautiful cloth binding. Price, $1.25 per copy.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE ENGLISH MAY DAY. By Eleanor Lane Peabody. A pageant play written for and produced by Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., on May 17th, 1924. An entirely new and effective presentation of the historical meaning of the English May Day. Not difficult to produce and an almost sure success even in the hands of inexperienced groups. A colorful pageant with the added value of an effective musical program which can be as simple or elaborate as the ability of the producing groups will allow. As an unique arrangement of an entertainment of perennial popularity, it carries our highest recommendation. Characters ad. lib. Price, 35 Cents.

THE OLD TIMER. By George A. Elton. A Minstrel opening chorus and finale, utilizing a perfect and tuneful blend of some of the most famous minstrel songs with an interlarding of new and original matter. The essence of the opening is a hearty welcome, of the type that will start your show with a bang and carry it through to a whirlwind finish. The finale conveys a "thank you" in a novel way — one that will send your audience home in a cheerful mood, with the desire to come back for more. The words are rich in humor and haunting melody and with just the right touch of sentiment. Suited to all kinds of minstrels large or small, amateur or professional, lodge, school, and church and with not a suggestion of impropriety. Written by a man who has traveled with our best minstrel companies and is widely known for his musical work. For creating a good first and last impression, this chorus is without a peer. Complete piano score, words, and music. Price, post paid, 75 Cents.

PARODY WARBLERS MINSTREL FIRST PART. By Arthur LeRoy Kaser. A completely arranged first part routine. Including all dialogue between interlocutors and end men. Words of opening chorus and finale and all songs called for, and complete stage business. It has been the author's idea in writing this first part, to mix a few of the old time "ne'er to be forgotten melodies" in with the conglomeration of modern black-face cross-fire of the merry-making end men. The melodies used have been carefully selected for their appealing qualities, their undying popularity, and to their easy procurement. The use of this routine for the circle eliminates the great task of building a first part and affords a snappy, properly built program laid out in a manner that is professional at its best. Thoroughly professional in style yet entirely practical for amateurs, giving a big opening for local jokes. Price, 25 Cents.

1925—NEW PLAYS—1925

RICKETY, RACKETY RADIO. By Arthur LeRoy Kaser. A black-face farce in one act, for 8 males and several extra characters if desired. As the title suggests, this afterpiece is a burlesque of a radio broadcast. Gridley, who 'nipulates the radio, invites several of his friends to hear the concert. Here develops a side-splitting situation where the superstition of the party is worked on to the limit. Every person who has even a remote acquaintance with broadcasting will appreciate this burlesque. An opening for a novel specialty act is provided for a singing quartette. A lively bit of negro "nonsense" fine for any minstrel show, vaudeville program, or club entertainment. Full of rollicking humor, odd situations, and just the thing for a wind up to send everyone home happy. Price, 25 Cents.

TOP LINERS—FOR STUNT NIGHT AND VOD-VIL. By Arthur LeRoy Kaser. A new and original collection of, "some of this and some of that"—concocted by a specialist in the vaudeville field, for the use of either the amateur or professional entertainer. The contents include four hilarious monologues—four guaranteed success one-act vaudeville skits—several pages of street chatter, including many rhymes and jingles—a wealth of minstrel cross-fire with fill-in bits of digs and jabs, and thirty-eight stories for the story teller. The longer sketches as well as the monologues have been so arranged that specialties may easily be introduced. The shorter articles such as "Rhymes and Jingles," "Street Chatter," "The Monologist and His Newspaper," etc., can be easily used as insertions in almost any form of monologue or cross-fire talking act. The minstrel cross-fire is of the modern type and utilizeable wherever minstrel end men jokes are required. The collection is worth many times the price to the director who is in search of stuff that has not been worn threadbare. Bound in attractive art covers. Price, 75 Cents.

ACTING CHARADES. By Laura E. Richards. A collection of fifty-four different charades, with an additional list of one hundred and fifty words. This little book, the outcome of over half a century of "Playing Charades" is offered to those persons who, in camp, school, or home circle, are "seeking a word." Many of the charades are old familiar friends—others are possibly novel—most of them have been tried on the critical audience of a boys' camp. The author has endeavored to meet the varying tastes of charade lovers. Some want a word that can be acted entirely in dumb show, some like a scrap of dialogue which their own quick wit can use as a frame work or scaffolding on which to build, while others further demand a definite "part" which can be memorized and rehearsed. All three varieties will be found in this book, while the list of words at the end suggest further fields to conquer. We suggest this new book as an ideal collection of entertainments to fill out programs. Price, 75 Cents.

UNCLE JOSH STORIES. By Cal Stewart. Cal Stewart who gave to millions of his admirers that kindly old rural philosopher and humorist, Uncle Josh, has "passed over." The humor of Cal Stewart is like a draft of sweet cool air in a hot stuffy room. For years, hearts have been made lighter, homes have been made happier, and troubles have been borne away on the wings of his hearty laughter. This collection, the first of the "Uncle Josh Stories," promises to be a prolific source of entertainment to millions of people and in no better way can Stewart's cheerful, old-fashioned humor be better preserved. "Uncle Josh" can get into more pesky predicaments than any other male critter. Read any one of the thirty or more selections and we guarantee that first you'll chuckle, then you'll giggle, then you'll burst into a big laugh, hearty and unashamed. Stewart's knowledge of life, which he so humorously portrays in these readings, come from his varied experiences as a stage-coach driver, a locomotive engineer, and an actor. His philosophy of life is: "I'd sooner tell Peter on the last day, about the laffs I have given folks on earth, than try to explain about giving' them heart akes." Bound in substantial art covers at 75 Cents per copy.

BIBLE PARABLES IN PANTOMIME. By Eleanor Wood Whitman. Containing: "The Use of Talents," a pantomime in one act based on the Parable of the Talents in Matthew 25: 14-20; and Luke 19: 11-27. Scene, an oriental street with bazars and a door representing the entrance to a house. This street is easily constructed with stools and hangings and small wares for sale. This colorful parable lends itself to pantomime since the coming and going in the market place is all action and the words of the noble man and his companions can be picturesquely portrayed. Moral Courage. In one act, based on the story of Jeremiah and the Rechabites in Jeremiah, Chapter 35. A scene out of the life of one of the great prophets in a stirring period of history, made into a living picture. Simple stage setting. 3 men, 10 boys, 4 girls. Girls may take all the boys' parts since there is no speaking and oriental costumes are almost the same for both. Both of these stories are excellent for Sunday night church service or a special occasion of the Young People's Society, or the Church School. Price, 25 Cents.

1925—NEW PLAYS—1925

ANTIQUES. Comedy in One Act. By Emerson Russell. 3 females. Setting: an old fashioned parlor. Costumes, modern. Time, the present. Properties, simple. Plays about 20 minutes. Theme, the effect antiques have on three different persons. An incisive comedy, cleverly characterized, with no long speeches. Has a surprise ending. Every part offers effective acting opportunities. Plot, two half-sisters, inheritors of their mother's estate, expose their real selves when one of them thinks that an old teapot has great value as an antique. The arrival of a judge of such matters produces an unusual double climax. Especially recommended to women's clubs and little theatre groups that want something novel with literary merit as well. Royalty, $5.00.
Price, 35 Cents.

IMPORTANT

PLEASE REMEMBER.—No books exchanged, sent subject to return, or orders filled without a remittance. No discount on cast or quantity orders.

REMITTANCES should be made by Post Office or Express Money Order, or by Registered Letter. It is never safe to send bills or currency by ordinary mail.

POSTAGE STAMPS will be accepted in sums less than one dollar, provided they are in perfect condition.

PATIENCE.—If you do not receive your goods promptly it is perhaps not the publishers' fault. Perhaps your letter or the goods miscarried; perhaps you have not signed your name or given your town. We sometimes get orders saying send by a certain day, already past. Allow sufficient time before inquiring, but do not wait several months. Make special inquiry at your postoffice and ask your postmaster to look in his package and newspaper mail.

NEW PLAYS AND BOOKS

— Season 1925 —

THE SUICIDE SPECIALIST

By Carl Webster Pierce

An unusual play in three acts. Five males, six females. Two easy interiors, one of them extremely simple. Modern costumes. Plays a full evening. If your society has given you the task of "looking up a play," and wants something which is startlingly original, which will have the audience on edge wondering what will happen next — what there is that can thrill after what has gone before; something which will cause uncontrollable laughter and breathless suspense, don't despair of your task and feel ready to commit suicide—that is, not without proper advice. First, get a copy of "THE SUICIDE SPECIALIST" and read Dr. Milton's ad: "If you are contemplating suicide come to me for instruction. Don't be a bungler. Do it with dispatch." Then read on and see what happened when a struggling young physician who advertised in the above manner to save himself from starvation, and who had a sincere desire to aid humanity in the queerest, most amazing manner of all time, found patients flocking to him. The climax of this hilarious farce offers one of the funniest situations to be found in any play in the amateur field. Not since the Sphinx sneezed has a play of such queer originality been written. Royalty $10.00

Price, 35 cents.

TEA FOR THREE

A Comedy in three acts. By Roi Cooper Megrue. 3 males, two females. Scenery, simple interiors. Plays a full evening. This is one of Mr. Megrue's cleverest comedies. It is not a crook play like "Under Cover" but a suave society comedy in which three characters, husband, wife and candid friend, sustain the play. As a New York critic said at the time of its premier, at the Maxime Elliott Theatre, "The sequences of the story are largely mental rather than physical and yet the action is rapid, engrossing and logical. It is first rate drama." It is an ironical and sophisticated comedy based upon the "eternal triangle" but in an entirely new manner and it is in no sense a sex play. In fact when the entire situation is revealed in the last act, not only is Friend Husband tremendously surprised but the audience shares his amazement. The dialogue is a perpetual delight and the parts calling for trained and skilful amateurs are admirable in every way. "Tea for Three" was one of the brilliant successes of its day on the professional stage, and will well repay the efforts of any group which is looking for a comedy which is out of the ordinary and is of the finest fibre. Royalty, $25.00.

Price, 75 cents.

Send for a Copy of our New Free Catalogue.

It Describes More Than a Thousand Plays.

BAKER'S PLAYS, BOSTON, MASS.

NEW PLAYS AND BOOKS

BE

Boston Public Library Central Library, Copley Square

Division of Reference and Research Services

The Date Due Card in the pocket indicates the date on or before which this book should be returned to the Library.

Please do not remove cards from this pocket.

It describes more than a thousand plays.

BAKER'S PLAYS, BOSTON, MASS.

DUE

1929

547179

